Cyber Mercenaries #2 ?

Cyber-espionage perpetrated not just by lone hackers but by Russian and Chinese spies — has been identified as a major threat to the world in 2016 Source: Getty Images

GLOBAL THREAT NUMBER TWO — CYBER-ESPIONAGE

The world has already witnessed countless examples of the damage hackers are capable of, whether it's leaking classified military information, or bringing down a Hollywood production company.

Mr Clapper said cyber-espionage continued to pose a major risk to the governments of the world and warned that ISIS was developing a similar capability.

Specifically, Russian and Chinese hackers have been targeting information systems controlled by the US government and American industry. Military personnel networks, supply chains and critical information structure were vulnerable, with many having already incurred hits.

Mr Clapper said Beijing selectively used cyberattacks against targets it believed threatened Chinese domestic stability or regime legitimacy.

US National Intelligence Director James Clapper says in 2016 Cyber Espionage came second to ISIS as the biggest world threats.

1. ISIS
2. Cyber Espionage
3. North Korea

Hackers previously held the crown in 2013, 2014 and 2015.

THE ESSENTIALS OF REUTERS SOURCING

Home > Specialised Guidance > The Essentials of Reuters sourcing

Our reputation for accuracy and freedom from bias rests on the credibility of our sourcing. A Reuters journalist or reporter is always the best source on a matter and should not be allowed to rely on an unnamed source. We should never deliberately mislead in our sourcing, quote a source saying one thing on the record and the opposite or something clearly contradictory on background, or cite sources in the plural when we know only one. An article should also not be written as if it is based on multiple unnamed sources. All journalists should be familiar with the following essentials.

Did a Kuwaiti Prince Convert to Christianity?

Kuwaiti Royal Prince:
Abdullah al-Sabah
Declared "his faith in Jesus Christ."

BY MICHAEL GRYBOSKI, CHRISTIAN POST REPORTER

Mystery still surrounds an audio file released by a Middle Eastern media outlet alleging that a Kuwaiti prince has converted to Christianity.

Earlier this month, an Arab satellite channel called Al-Haqiqa released an audio file allegedly recorded by a Prince Abdullah Al-Sabah. In the recording, he says he has left Islam for Christianity and added, "I believe if I am killed, I will be with Jesus Christ forever."

In the recording, Al-Sabah also speaks critically of Jihadist organizations, including those who recently won a majority of the seats in Egypt's new parliament.

"Groups of Islamists always wanted to attack different cities around the world but God protected and is still protecting the world," said the voice on the tape.

From the onset of its release, the Kuwaiti government stated that the audio recording was a fraud and denied that there was a prince by the name of "Abdullah Al-Sabah" in the Kuwaiti royal family.

In an article written by Marco Tosatti of the Vatican Insider, the name "Abdullah" does in fact appear in the family tree of the ruling family of Kuwait but not among living family members.
